Session 4: Breakout Sessions

4A: AEC 2030 | The Rise of the AI-Powered + Data-Driven “Superconsultancy”

By 2030, the AEC landscape as we know it will be radically different. In this forward-looking presentation, BST Global Chief Executive Officer Javier A. Baldor will explore converging megatrends within AI, big data, and emerging tech that will define who wins and who falls by the wayside. Introducing the concept of the “Superconsultancy 2030,” a firm that is powered and driven by all things AI and data, this session explores how:

- GenAI-powered super agents will redefine work and project delivery
- AI, machine learning and big data will reshape how consultancies operate
- Time-based billing will give way to value-driven business models
- Firms must shift from project-based services to data-centric products
- AI-native entrants will disrupt the AEC competitive landscape

Javier will delve into real-world use cases from some of the world’s preeminent AEC firms, including AtkinsRéalis, Gensler, Jacobs, Parsons, Stantec and WSP, which presented at BST Global’s 2025 AI Summit. The message is clear: The opportunities and future before us require everyone to think differently - not only to survive but to thrive in the AI era.

Presenter: Javier A. Baldor, CEO, BST Global

4B: Getting the Most Out of Your In-House Legal & Risk Management Team

Join Greyling/EPIC’s unique panel of experts, including a former in-house general counsel, former outside defense counsel, and career insurance specialist, to hear strategies for maximizing your executive team’s utilization of in-house legal and risk management resources. We will answer questions such as optimal make-up of in-house teams considering firm size and type, the in-house counsel’s role in claims, how and where in-house counsel should best spend their time, how in-house counsel contributes to M&A activity, networking and training opportunities, and ideal interfacing between in-house and external resources including brokers, attorneys, consultants, and advisors.

Presenters: Greyling Insurance Brokerage & Risk Consulting, a division of EPIC
Kent Collier, JD - Managing Principal
Jeaninne Ryan, Principal
Roger Guilian, JD - Senior Vice President

4C: Leading Growth Through Employee-Ownership

As the AEC industry faces generational transitions, talent retention challenges, and evolving definitions of value, employee ownership is emerging as a powerful lever for long-term growth. This session will explore how CEOs can use ownership not just as a financial structure, but as a strategic tool to align leadership, deepen employee commitment, and build resilient, high-performing firms. Through insights and peer discussion, this session will detail how ownership culture can drive innovation, succession planning, and sustainable value creation—while reinforcing purpose and performance at every level. Panelists will also speak from experience as they address the practical challenges that employee-owned firms must anticipate and plan for proactively.

Moderator: Emma Orr, EFCG Vice President, Strategy & Corporate Finance

4D: AEC Sustainability Reimagined: Strategy, Value, & Resilience

As ESG skepticism and tightening federal support collide with mounting climate-driven losses, AEC firms find themselves at a strategic crossroads. Clients are demanding practical, cost-effective sustainability and adaptation solutions - ones that align with real business goals. For firms, this requires clarifying their purpose, rethinking their market focus, and innovating business models for resilience and relevance. This breakout session invites forward-thinking CEOs to explore how sustainability—when reframed as core strategy—can drive differentiation, growth, and long-term value.

Presenter & Moderator: Andreas Georgoulas, EFCG Director, Sustainability & ESG

Session 5: AI, Talent, and the Future of Work in AEC

The persistent talent shortage is no longer just a workforce issue—it's a strategic imperative. To frame the challenge, EFCG will provide a snapshot of where the highest opportunities for automation sit today and why firms keep returning to a single question: Can AI close the talent gap? CEOs from cutting-edge AEC firms will share their perspective on how firms can start to answer this question by integrating AI into their operations. From deploying AI copilots that reduce repetitive drafting to leveraging collaboration tools that extend the reach of scarce experts, these CEOs will offer insights into what their firms are doing to further enable their future workforce. They will also explore the cultural shifts that accompany these changes, including how firms are balancing automation with upskilling, professional identity, and long-term talent development. This is a conversation about what's working, what's emerging, and what remains uncertain as the industry evolves.

Moderator: Marcus Quigley, EFCG Partner, Technology & Innovation

Session 9: Driving Employee Commitment Through Culture and Impact

Today’s engineering professionals want more than just a paycheck—they seek purpose, alignment with their values, and the opportunity to do meaningful work. EFCG data and research shows that professional development and a strong, purpose-driven culture are critical to fostering long-term employee engagement and retention. This session will explore how strategically chosen, high-impact projects—emphasizing adaptation, future-proof design, and long-term value—create opportunities for growth, learning, and mission-aligned work. These projects not only deepen employee commitment, but also improve utilization, enhance profitability, and strengthen client relationships.

Morning Refresh Break

Session 10: Breakout Sessions

10A: Investing for Growth: Back Office Strategy for Smaller Firms

Making the decision to add non-billable staff to a small firm can be daunting. However, the right hire can serve as an accelerant to growth and profitability. Our panelists will discuss how they developed their approach to the back office, and how it enabled them to focus on growth.

Presenters & Moderators:

Emily Shaw, EFCG Senior Vice President, M&A
Vishal Menon, EFCG Vice President, Strategy & Corporate Finance

Panelists:

Chad Helmle, CEO & President, Craftwater
Regine Jeune, President, DB Sterlin

10B: Succession in Practice: Reflections from CEOs and CEO-Elects

Building on the insights from Session 8: Succession by Design, this breakout offers a rare opportunity to hear directly from the CEOs of VHB and RS&H—joined by their CEO-elects—for a candid conversation about their succession journeys. In this intimate setting, participants will explore what worked, what didn’t, and how each leader navigated the transition from their unique vantage point. With plenty of time reserved for audience questions, this session invites open dialogue to uncover the real-world dynamics behind a CEO succession, from building trust and preparing the organization to stepping into the role with clarity and confidence.

10C: Leading an AI-Integrated Firm: Aligning Gen AI with Firm Values

As generative AI reshapes the AEC industry, forward-thinking firms are exploring how to integrate these powerful tools in ways that enhance operations while staying true to their core values. In this session, Jay Margherio, EFCG’s Vice President of Technology & Innovation, will share how leading firms are aligning AI investments with strategic goals—streamlining workflows, improving analytics, and empowering teams across finance and beyond. CEOs will gain insights into practical applications of AI, governance considerations, and how to foster a culture of responsible innovation that supports long-term growth.

Presenter: Jay Margherio, EFCG Vice President, Technology & Innovation

Lunch & Session 11: The US Administration’s Impact on AEC Industry

The first 10 months of the Trump Administration and a new Congress has brought disruption that has and continues to create both opportunities and challenges for the AEC industry. A new law that locks in beneficial tax policies for the industry, coupled with a renewed focus on permitting and regulatory streamlining to move projects more efficiently have been balanced against challenges in the renewable energy sector, the ongoing tariff agenda, and uncertainties in various federal agencies and programs that drive and fund projects in the built environment. ACEC’s Executive Vice President Steve Hall will brief attendees on the progress to date of the industry’s advocacy agenda—what’s done, what’s on the horizon, and what’s being done to manage disruption on behalf of the industry. Steve will also speak to the political cycle that hangs over the policy debate—early state races in 2025 to watch and the state of play for control of Congress in 2026.
